How is Animal Communication like Texting?

By Dawn R. Tule, April 2024

Animal communication uses the universal language of telepathy. Universal language, meaning, we All do this to some degree, and we all have the potential to clearly connect with all life and all species!

Using this way of communicating gives you a very full and deep understanding of the being you're connecting with.

And it's Fast! Really fast! Sometimes, during a session, I don't even get the person's question out before receiving an answer to that question because animals are really good at this.

So, in that way, animal communication is fast, like texting.

But here's the thing ~ we have to take that information we receive and translate it to get a clear and complete understanding. The information comes in words, images, feelings, smells, tastes, and knowing.

We translate that information through our filters. And, we humans can have some clogged filters! What can distort our translating ability, or clog our filters? Beliefs, old patterns, our self-talk, doubts, fears, and distractions just to name a few.

In the animal communication classes I teach, a big part of learning to be an effective listener and translator is about clearing our filters. This is, of course, a lifetime project! Knowing yourself and your own personal beliefs and triggers, and learning to stay in your Heart to meet the other being with openness are the keys to clear communication.

One way to do this is to practice 'Creating Sacred Space'. This can include clearing techniques, grounding, breathwork, calling in help from your guides, and tools such as essential oils and crystals. The key is to take the time to be present, and use what you need to be clear and receptive to listening to the other being on a deep level.

This is my process before every single animal connection. If I'm rushing around or distracted or busy, the connection won't be clear, and I'm not honoring the animal, you, or this work.

So, in that way, animal communication is very much NOT like texting.
